1st Report

Dear John Doe,

We've found your personal information on data brokers and people-search sites included in your privacy scan. This privacy report shows each of the sources we've checked, what we found, and what Clearnym can do to help remove your data. To start the removal process, begin your trial and we'll submit opt-out requests to the data brokers where your information appears. After each request is submitted, our privacy team will go back and check each source again to confirm whether your information has been removed. Some data brokers process removals within days, while slower sources can take several weeks to honor requests. Remember: even after removals are complete, Google and other search engines may take additional time to update cached search results. New data brokers may also appear over time, but don't worry — Clearnym will continue scanning covered sources and submitting removals for the personal information we find. It's all included in your membership. Our privacy team will keep working on your behalf, and when we have significant updates to your privacy report, we'll let you know. Thank you. At Clearnym, your privacy is our only business.
